“ I happened across the paperwork for a pup my wife and I adopted in 2011, and remembered Tootie from that day. The pup was a handicapped dachshund named Gus and she was fostering it. When I called and asked if he was still available to adopt, she cried because she was so moved at the thought that anyone would want him. That's the kind of person I knew her as, if only briefly - someone who cared about animals and had a big heart. People who are that way about animals are almost always that way with people, and I am sure she is missed.
