“ I am shaken. When Rae Lynne's photo popped up, I assumed she was receiving an award for something amazing she'd done; she did so many amazing things. I taught with Rae Lynne at Southeast High School, but I was also a student at UIS after she transferred there. She was legendary in both schools for her kindness, her knowledge, and her willingness to go above and beyond for her students. She was one of the best people I have met in life. My heart goes to her son, her husband, and the rest of her family.

“ I had the distinct pleasure of working with Rae Lynne as she served side-by-side with me in her role as the coordinator for the surgery clerkship, a rotation in medical school during which medical students learn the art and science of surgical practice.

Rae Lynne would often comment how lucky she was to work at the medical school and what an amazing experience it was to work with students on their journey towards becoming the future physicians of our society. However, it was really us who were the fortunate ones to have had the privilege and honor of working with Rae Lynne. It was clear to all who worked with her that she was a caring, sincere person whose uplifting spirit touched those who were fortunate to know her. To the students she so diligently supported, she was always there with a note of encouragement, a helping hand, or even just a listening ear. Colleagues, staff and faculty alike knew that they could count on her at a moment's notice when they had questions, large or small.

As a physician, I have had the privilege of being a part of many patients' journeys as they shared their stories of struggle with disease. But none touched me so personally as did Rae Lynne's hard-fought battle with her illness. She truly was an inspiration to me with her bravery, even as her disease progressed. All the while, she maintained a positive attitude and her voice was full of hope and optimism. She leaves a hole in our hearts that cannot be filled. Rae Lynne, may you find solace and comfort in heaven, and know that you will be missed deeply.
